Florence Nightingale was born in Florence, Italy on May 12, 1820. She was a celebrated English Nurse, leader, prolific writer and statistician. She became famous for her work as a nurse in the Crimeal war, where she attended the wounded soldiers. However she observed that soldiers were dying due to wounds infections from the hospital itself. It was during this time that she was referred to as the 'Lady with the Lamp'.

Her observations led to her model of nursing, which emphasized the importance of nature in the healing process, it being the role of the nurse to ensure the environment is suitable to allow healing to take place. This in turn led to her new design of ward, reducing cross infection rates drastically, and used throughout the UK, some remaining in use up until the year 2000.

On her return to London she founded a School of Nursing at St. Thomas' Hospital with funds contributed by the public. International Nurses 'day was established by the International council of Nurses a 12 May, the birth anniversary of Florence Nightingale.
