We are free now; but we have got freedom without a bloody struggle. So, it has come very easy, to many of us to think freedom means the right to do or say whatever we like. There are young men, women and students who now think that they are quite at liberty to act, talk and behave as they like, to criticize their parents, teachers, elders, leaders and anyone who may not please them. They take pride in breaking the established rules and principles of behaviour and conduct, and delight in mobbing the referee in the playground, assaulting the invigilator in or outside the examination hall, travelling without ticket and rough-handling ticket checker. They think that the world now belongs to them and there is no authority but theirs. A day will, however, come when they will be young no more, and those who will be young then will pay them back in their own coin. They are sowing the seeds of indiscipline and lawlessness and they must also reap the fruit.

- i) What does freedom mean to many of us and why ?
 - ii) Why do the youth abuse this newly got freedom ?
 - iii) Give some examples of how young men break the established rules of conduct and behaviour.
 - iv) How will the youth suffer when they are no longer young.
 - v) Use the following in sentence of your own to make its meaning clear :
 - (a) Pay back in the same coin.
 - (b) Reap fruit.
